

INVITATION
Final conference
20 September 2019
10-13, FHM Schwerin
August-Bebel-Str. 11/12
19055 Schwerin

Welcome!

Many organisations, initiatives and projects search for ways to successfully integrate refugees. The Erasmus+ project “Job to Stay” paid particular attention to the integration of female refugees into the tourism labour market and the social life. Now, the project slowly reaches its deadline. For this reason, we want to look back and use the chance to carry the project idea further on in the future. The project partners will share their findings and discuss with experts from economy, politics, science and society to find joint plans for a sustainable conduction of the common objective.

Since 1 October 2017, nine international partners have been looking for successful ways to integrate female refugees into the labour market and social life. The interdisciplinary project team gathered many successful stories; numerous women and also some male refugees have already been integrated into the tourism labour market sustainably.

Let's celebrate together: all interested people from economy, society, education and policy are invited to the final conference of Job to Stay on the 20 September 2019. The conference allows room for common exchange of experiences in the integration of refugees, a sensitization on all levels, but also the presentation of successful examples as flagship projects for others. The project results of Job to Stay will be presented, but the programme also offers a comprehensive look at the integration of female refugees from employers' and employees' points of view. The Ministry for Social Affairs, Integration and Equality of Mecklenburg-Western Pomerania will also be able to report on its experiences of recent years. The programme is attached.

You will get all outputs of the Job to Stay project, such as the Job to Stay Qualification Pass. This instrument shall simplify the process of finding one of five suitable jobs for refugees in the tourism labour market. The need for specified trainings, referring to language or cultural differences, also become obvious. Along with this material come the guidelines, making it an easy and adaptable instrument for everyone. The Job to Stay Green Paper adds some best practice examples from all over Europe and gives more insights in related initiatives.

The visitors can look forward to exciting insights, progress reports and an exchange at eye level. Naturally, all project results of Job to Stay are available as free copies for everyone. An exciting programme waits for you, we are happy to welcome you at our final conference!
